Requirements Review

In class we teamed up to review each others requirements. Austin looked over each of my requirements and did not notice anything wrong with any of them. He said that they were all high level requirements and meet the MITRE checklist. I looked over his requirements and noticed that a few of them said should instead of shall. I recommended for him to change the word should to shall.

I sent my sponsor my backlog of requirements and asked him to review each requirement to make sure that they met his needs. He replied saying that he approved each of my requirement statements. As a result, my sponsor can not argue about any information regarding the information specified in the requirements since I have proof of approval.
